HOW DOES DERMATOPOIETIN® WORK?

DERMATOPOIETIN-PLUS® is the patented biochemical interactive combination of polypeptide DERMATOPOIETIN® (sh-Polypeptide-17) and the peptide HEXADELTINE® (Hexapeptide-18). This combination ensures skin's health process by promoting wound healing, stimulating micro-circulation and interacting with the skin's health system.

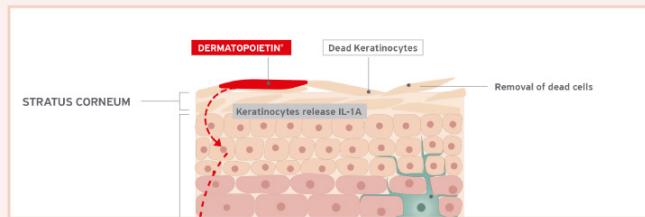

DERMATOPOIETIN® (DP) = interleukin-1 alpha (IL-1 α) is a well-known polypeptide abundant in human skin. Its main physiological activity in skin is to promote skin renewal. It stimulates keratinocytes in the epidermis to produce more IL-1 α , thereby generating a "chain reaction" of IL-1 α penetrating the epidermis (see scheme to the top). Upon arriving in the dermis, it activates the fibroblasts to produce collagen, elastin and hyaluronic acid.

Once DERMATOPOIETIN® touches the surface of the skin (Stratum Corneum) it activates Keratinocytes that release IL-1 α . (The Activation of the Keratinocytes occurs by a biochemical signal transmitted to the membrane receptors. The signal is translated by receptors).

The signal goes through epidermis and hits Fibroblasts in the Dermis. The natural and endogenous reaction of Fibroblast is to start producing proteins, particularly Elastin, Collagen and Hyaluronic Acid.

HOW THE SIGNALLING COSMETICS® WORK

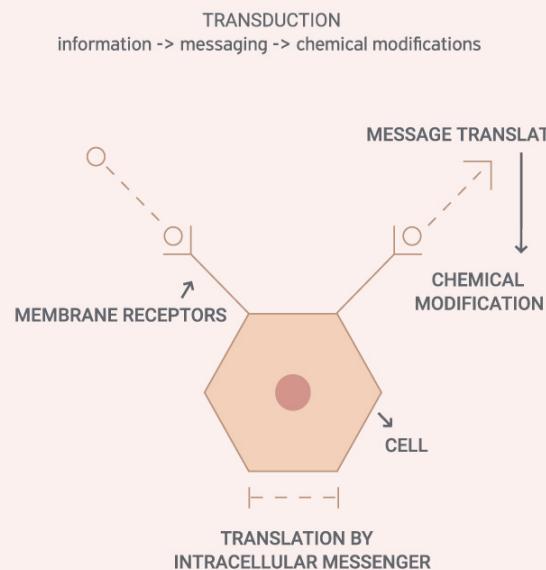

The DERMATOPOIETIN® polypeptide sends a message to the first alive Keratinocytes on the Stratum Corneum. In that moment DERMATOPOIETIN® polypeptide sends a message and receptors of Keratinocytes take the message and translate. The message is recognised as endogenous and perfectly safe.

Keratinocytes cells have membrane receptors that receive physical or chemical signals. Some of them are called Intracellular Messenger (steroids, organic molecules, peptides, etc).

Receptors translate the external signal into a chemical/biochemical intracellular signal. This triggers a cascade effect to amplify the signal.

The molecular circuit involved in translation and transmission includes receptors, channels, enzymes and regulatory proteins.
